*"If you want people to care about the river,
you have to teach them about the river."*
—Pete Seeger

Dear Friends,

In 2011, Clearwater saw many beautiful sunrises and sunsets and the positive milestones that we reached are due to the continued support of people just like you!

This past year, Clearwater's education programs served almost 20,000 kids from New York City to Albany, making certain that Pete Seeger's legacy continues on into the future.

In February, a few of our youth were invited to the White House by President Obama's staff to the America's Great Outdoors Initiative (AGOI) Launch Ceremony and were able to spend some time with Department of the Interior Secretary Ken Salazar. This invitation was extended by White House staff due to Clearwater's participation in the 2011 AGOI Listening Sessions, thereby proving that voices raised, our youth are speaking (and singing) out!

March left the world reeling, as Japan faced the largest nuclear disaster in its history – a catastrophe that struck home for many New York State residents that live in the shadow of Indian Point. As such, Clearwater ramped up its efforts to close Indian Point and transition to a green energy economy by holding a special sail and technical briefing, a Summit for Solutions, which focused on the risks of continued operation of Indian Point and the benefits of transitioning to a sustainable energy economy. We continued to fight Entergy's ongoing misinformation campaign and to pursue legal challenges in front of the Atomic Safety Relicensing Board, including contentions regarding Environmental Justice, the leaks and on-site waste storage. Clearwater is looking forward to a bright future- one that doesn't have Indian Point in it.

The summer saw Clearwater celebrating its 10th anniversary of its Young Women at the Helm program – a milestone that many hands helped us reach and we are so grateful to see this critical youth empowerment program, along with its Young Men at the Helm counterpart, continue.

In the fall of 2011, Clearwater was awarded substantial support from individual donors and New York State Office of Parks, Recreation & Historic Preservation to commence construction on our Kingston Home Port & Education Center in the spring of 2012, in conjunction with the Hudson River Maritime Museum. Creating an official home port for the sloop Clearwater's winter maintenance period, this will allow the sloop Clearwater to continue to serve people from Albany to New York City. Once constructed, Clearwater will be able to provide better upriver environmental education programs and community led green infrastructure training.

While operating a diverse non-profit with such important message is a difficult process, Clearwater is continuing to become financially healthier, reducing our past debt and are operating Clearwater annually on a financially sustainable model.

Together, we're continuing to make enormous strides. Our river communities are safer, healthier, and happier because of the work we've done together. But we still face great challenges, and the next generation needs our help to tackle the looming trials they and their planet will face.

We thank you for joining us in our mission to preserve and protect the Hudson River. Let's continue to get inspired, educated and activated – together!

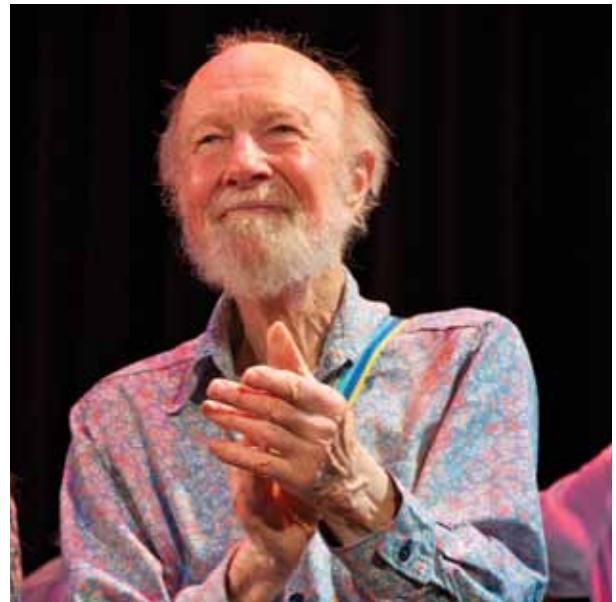

Allan Shope, Chairman of the Board

Jeff Rumpf, Executive Director

OUR MISSION

Clearwater's strategy to inspire, educate and activate New York State's communities is still a powerful formula for success. Clearwater has continually created effective and synergetic program departments based on each of these themes. Created by a group of citizens tired of the Hudson River being maintained as an open sewer, our mission is to preserve and protect the Hudson River for the benefit of its eco-system and human communities while creating new environmental leaders for a sustainable future.

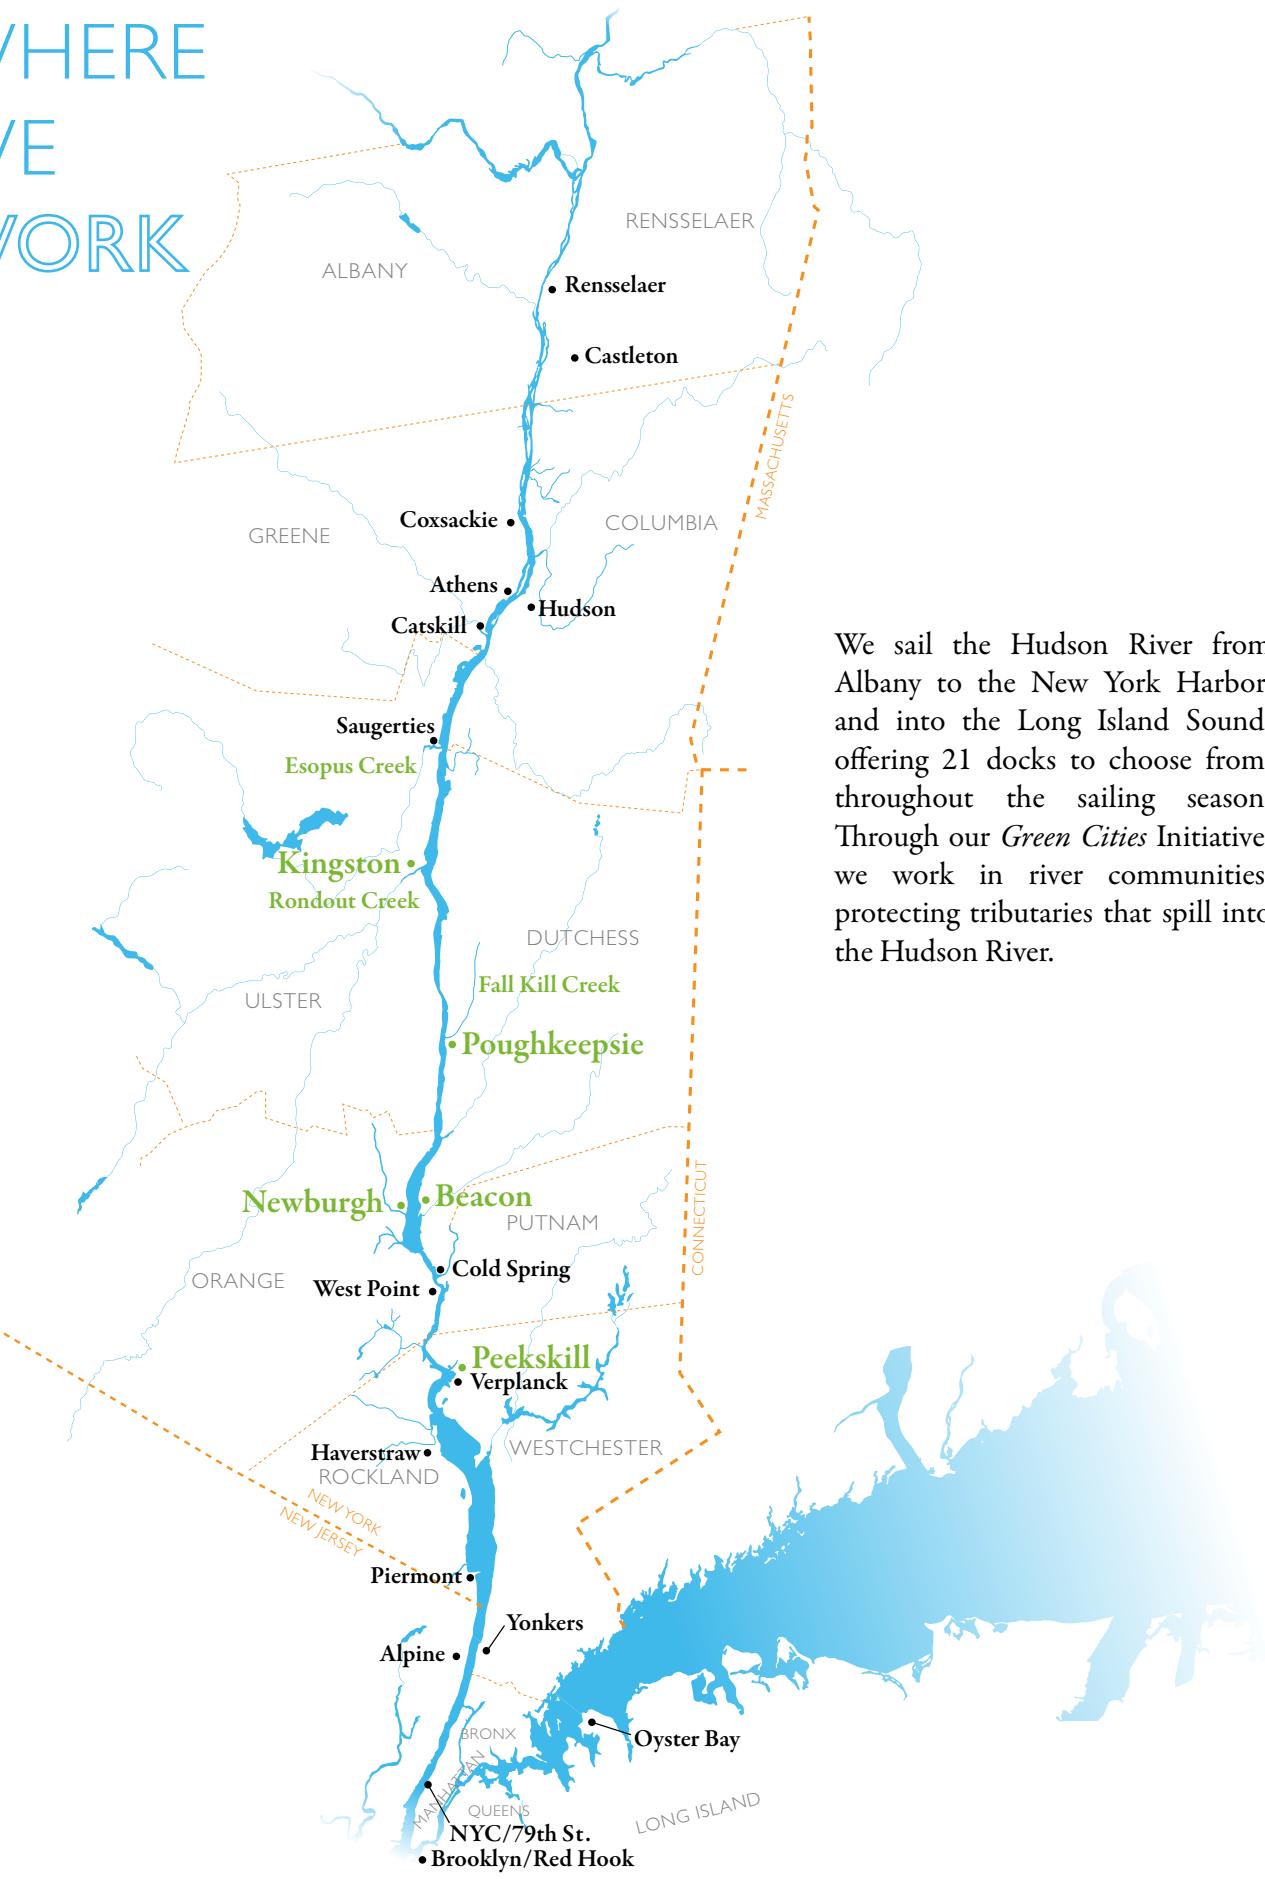

Clearwater is a 12-year old who starts a recycling program in their school; a leader of the Department of Environmental Conservation; a business owner incubating green jobs; a musician singing for a cleaner river or a parent who teaches their kids how to live in harmony with nature. At this critical time, we need to mobilize all of our resources to grow the next generation of environmental leaders. As Pete Seeger says, "The time is now, or we will not, I fear, have a future for the human race."

WHERE WE WORK

Hudson River Sloop Clearwater was born with music flowing through its core, continually rousing our members, partners, and supporters to enact change and 2011 was a year of absolutely inspiring moments! From our sloop-based programs and Camp Clearwater, to our Power of Song program, Clearwater utilizes music and the arts to educate our citizenry about our history and to inspire us to change our futures. Via song and participation we work to establish our nation's legacy and define its character. Over the course of 2011, Clearwater paid homage to the generations of Clearwater leaders that have come before, to those currently building on their successes, and to the generations we must forge paths for in order for them to have a safe future. Below are a few of the major events where Clearwater celebrated its Generations.

CLEARWATER GENERATIONS: AN EARTH DAY CELEBRATION

The theme of Clearwater's special events in 2011 was Generations. Our first event to encompass this premise was our annual Earth Day Concert, held at Tarrytown Music Hall. From the opening with Pete Seeger and Clearwater's Power of Song, to the evening's encores, folk royalty and an incredible mix of the next generation of folk musicians reminded us about the power that song and community can have when joined together.

A FUN-FILLED FESTIVAL

An annual tradition in June, held on Father's Day weekend, Clearwater's Great Hudson River Revival is considered the summation of our organization's ideals. Bringing together almost a thousand passionate volunteers, unbelievable music and two days of giving back, while learning how to better our earth, our lives and each other are quintessential Clearwater principles and the 2011 Festival with its theme of Clearwater Generations was no exception.

This year's Revival proved that the power of song is unwavering, as is the draw of community action and environmental stewardship. With record breaking crowds of almost 20,000 people, the 2011 Festival provided respite, rejuvenation and renewal for many long time attendees, and proved to be an enlightening experience for the thousands of new friends we welcomed. Additionally, Clearwater listened to recommendations from our guests and added a new Jam Tent and an Artisanal Food & Farm market, both of which were huge successes. From performances by Pete Seeger and Clearwater's Power of Song Program, Janis Ian, Deer Tick, Peter Yarrow, & Martin Sexton (with hundreds more, listed on page 40) this year proved that the Festival is here to stay – and it will be better than ever next year!

POWER OF SONG BENEFIT CONCERT EXCITES, ACTIVATES, AND OCCUPIES!

The October 21st, sold out, high energy Clearwater benefit concert at Symphony Space to honor music impresario George Wein with the first annual "Power of Song" award featured performances by Pete Seeger, Tao Seeger, Arlo Guthrie, Suzanne Vega, Lucy Kaplansky, Tom Chapin and the Chapin Sisters, and many more.

The performances throughout the evening were punctuated by vignettes regarding the long and storied career of George Wein, the producer of such famous events as the Newport Folk Festival. Clearwater created this award to honor and recognize those individuals who have continually created opportunities for people across the globe to be stimulated and actuated by their music, and Mr. Wein was the perfect first recipient.

The concert closed with Tao Seeger and various other performers marching off the stage singing. Leaving the theater, the marching musicians were greeted by concert-goers who joined Tao Seeger and Pete Seeger, along with David Amram, Guy Davis, Tom Chapin and other musicians from the concert including Clearwater's Power of Song, to rally to Columbus Circle to join the Occupy Wall Street protest. Hundreds of Clearwater supporters and members were joined by ordinary people strolling home, in a scene that evoked memories of 40 years ago and the beginning of the environmental movement. The evening proved, yet again, that music can provide the activation needed to spur and power a movement to enact change.

CLEARWATER HOUSE PARTIES

When the founders of Clearwater started the organization so many decades ago, they had a major problem to figure out: How were they going to raise the funds to build a replica of the beautiful wooden boats that historically sailed the Hudson River? More importantly, how were they going to get people to care in a lasting way about the river so they didn't just give a dollar here, or ten dollars there, but instead, invested their lives in taking care of one of their greatest natural and historical resources, directly in many of their backyards? One of Pete Seeger's answers became house parties.

For decades, Clearwater has helped members and friends alike learn how to throw a Clearwater House Party. A very easy thing to do, one simply needs to invite anywhere from ten to one thousand friends, play some music and have everyone bring a dish to share. We're grateful for the wide range in house parties some of our friends put on this year and invite you all to spread the message of environmental stewardship to your friends and family! In 2011, we had successful house parties raise money and awareness for Clearwater to wide and varied groups up and down the Hudson River – two of which were held by Clearwater board members, Alma Rodriguez and Robert Politzer – one held close to New York City and the other held in the heart of the Catskill Mountains.

EDUCATE

One of the essential challenges of education is to turn an abstract concept into something that a student can relate to directly. The Hudson River's ecology, history, and pollution issues are often nothing more than words on paper. Hudson River Sloop Clearwater (Clearwater) gives students a set of experiences that transform the Hudson from old stories of dead fish and toxic waste into a living and breathing ecosystem with a rich history to which they are now connected.

THE SLOOP CLEARWATER – A SAILING CLASSROOM

Sailing with schools and youth groups forms the heart of our education program. The 106-foot sloop is much more than an historic replica vessel. Our Sailing Classroom program introduces students of all ages to the ecology and history of the river. Students become part of our crew as they raise the sails, steer the boat, test for water quality, sing traditional sea and river songs, and identify the amazing diversity of life found in the Hudson estuary.

Clearwater can extend the impact of a sail program into the classroom as part of our new Streams option. Streams programs allow teachers to enhance a field experience on the river with a thematic lesson in the classroom with a Clearwater educator. Clearwater is also part of the HRE-

COS water quality network. Schools can track the sloop's location and gain access to live data that they can use during Hudson River lessons. Classes now receive Clearwater's Topsail Times, our new youth newsletter with educational activities, environmental lessons and updates from the boat. Every year, the sloop Clearwater and our sister ship, the schooner Mystic Whaler, bring over 15,000 students out on the river for a memorable experience that lasts far beyond their time onboard the boat.

AT THE RIVER'S EDGE WITH THE TIDELINE PROGRAM

The Tideline Program is a hands-on, land-based fieldtrip conducted by Clearwater in local riverfront parks. This interdisciplinary program enables younger students to embrace the many educational opportunities offered by the Hudson River. Tideline programs incorporate many of the same program elements as our boat-based program, but they typically run for the entire school day and can serve kids as young as kindergarteners. A Tideline fieldtrip can also include a classroom visit by a Clearwater educator. During the 2011 season, the program reached over 1,100 students in the Hudson Valley. Additionally, Clearwater offered the community our annual Sunset Seine & Song in the fall of 2011. With the end result of romantic evening sunsets and wonderful "magic hours," or the gloaming, as the Scottish call it, these evenings mixed music, environmental education and a chance for families to revel in the beauty that the fall season brings to the Hudson Valley.

YOUTH EMPOWERMENT

Clearwater celebrated our 10th year of Young People at the Helm in 2011 with two successful 3-day Youth Empowerment programs. Young Women at the Helm and Young Men at the Helm participants all received full scholarships to attend this transformative leadership experience aboard the ship. These youth empowerment programs provide the perfect platform for physical exertion, academic immersion, and emotional reflection in a safe environment. Participants were carefully chosen from a large pool of applicants who showed enthusiasm, leadership skills, and environmental interests. The young people attended ship-board classes, interacted with a variety of inspirational guest speakers, and learned to perform almost all of the vessel operations by their final day.

Young Women at the Helm served 21 girls over three days. Young Men at the Helm, in its third year, served 20 boys. These programs have become a gateway to leadership within Clearwater. A total of 25 youth interns served multiday sessions on the boat in 2011, 19 as one-week interns, 6 as two-week interns. Returning interns continue to build on their previous experience and take on more responsibilities. Many Young Women at the Helm and Young Men at the Helm graduates from previous years joined the crew as interns and apprentices during the 2011 sailing season. They served as exemplary crew members and role models for the younger students.

In its third year, Camp Clearwater, a powerful multiday co-ed empowerment program that involves kayaking, canoeing and hiking along the Hudson, served 39 participants. Students that graduated from the 2011 season came away feeling empowered and more connected than ever to their natural environment. For its third year, Clearwater offered intensive 21-day sessions, integrating our sloop programming and land-based education programming into the Camp's programming. In addition, 2010 saw Clearwater applying to receive American Camping Association certification. Camp Clearwater underwent extensive review and received accreditation 2011. This is how Clearwater ensures that it delivers the highest quality and safest programming each summer.

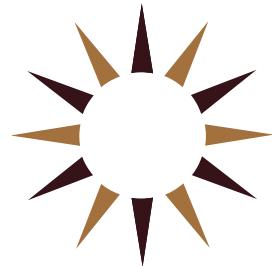

Singing on the sloop

POWER OF SONG

Drawing on the history of the power of music to affect change and empower youth, the Power of Song program was developed in 2009 at the express wish of our founder, Pete Seeger. The goal of this program is to allow youth the opportunity to explore the world of socially conscious music, expose them to an interactive learning experience, and empower them to be active on social and environmental justice issues that concern them. Power of Song apprentices performed at 13 concerts in 2011, including at the Clearwater Festival with Pete Seeger and Jackson Browne. Power of Song's after school program with Haldane Middle School in Cold Spring served 8 students. Two Power of Song Assemblies were presented to 600 kindergarten through 6th grade students in Dutchess County and the Bronx, and one Power of Song Songwriting workshop was given to 75 Westchester fifth graders.

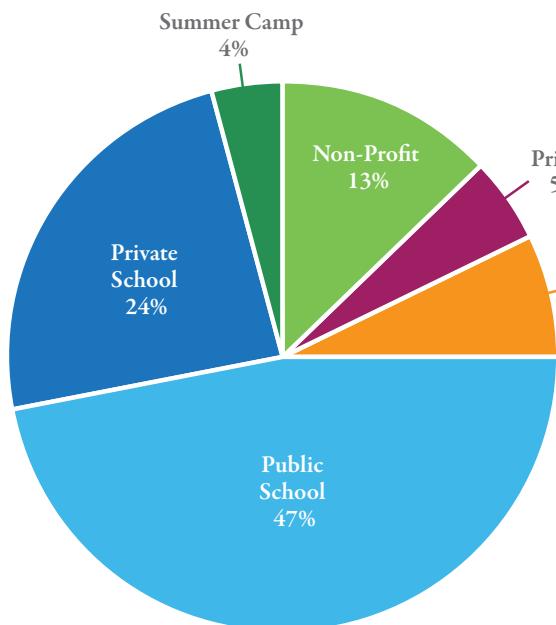

"Sometimes, people think that a song is just a song, but suddenly, when you hear a bunch of people singing it together, you realize that song is helping people make a future that we can all believe in."

ENVIRONMENTAL ACTION AND GREEN CITIES INITIATIVES

INDIAN POINT CAMPAIGN

In 2011, Clearwater continued to oppose the 20-year relicensing of Indian Point's aging nuclear power reactors, IP-2 and IP-3, which are located on the Hudson River in Buchanan, NY at the intersection of two earthquake faults just 25 miles north of New York City, in the most densely populated region of the country with more than 20 million people living or working within 50 miles of the plant. Indian Point's once through cooling system uses 2.5 billion gallons of river water and returns it 15 degrees warmer, causing massive fish kill to an already declining Hudson River fishery. In March, following the catastrophic and ongoing disaster at Fukushima, Clearwater began to ramp up its efforts to close Indian Point and transition to a green energy economy by holding a special sail and technical briefing, a Summit for Solutions, which focused on the risks of continued operation of Indian Point and the benefits of transitioning to a sustainable energy economy. With our partners, we continued to fight Entergy's ongoing misinformation campaign and to pursue legal challenges in front of the Atomic Safety Relicensing Board, including contentions regarding Environmental Justice, the leaks and on-site waste storage. A new permit for Indian Point would mean another 20 years of radioactive leaks, seriously overcrowded fuel pools, excessive fish kills and potential disasters. Clearwater will continue working on this issue in 2012 in an effort to keep New York residents safe and assure that the Hudson River ecosystem is protected.

HUDSON RIVER POLYCHLORINATED BIPHENYLS REMEDIATION

In 2011 Phase 2 of the Hudson River clean up of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) resumed with excellent results. Phase 1 of the dredging began in 2009 and resulted in 10 of 18 work areas being remediated, but General Electric ran out of time and a large area was capped, rather than remediated. During the 2010 Peer Review process, which followed, Clearwater stressed the critical need to minimize the resuspension or capping of PCB-contaminated sediments and to prevent that the volatilization of PCBs into the air. Many of these recommendations to improve the performance standards for remediating the remaining 35 miles of contaminated hotspots in the upper Hudson River were adopted, however concerns raised by the Federal Trustees (NOAA and Fish and Wildlife Service) and the NY State Canal Corporation, which we share, remain unaddressed. If left unremediated, approximately 136 acres of PCB-contaminated surface sediment, which are not planned for dredging, could delay the recovery of the aquatic ecosystem and prevent full use of the river channel by large shipping vessels – so there is still much work to be done. Clearwater also serves regularly on the Community Advisory Group (CAG) and in 2011 we were awarded a $50,000 EPA Technical Assistance Grant (TAG) to help bring good science to answer questions from municipal leaders, community members and the media and to address important issues and concerns.

GREEN CITIES

In 2011, Clearwater completed its first official year of operations for its Green Cities department. Through this Green Cities initiative, Clearwater continues the legacy of our founder, Pete Seeger, by bringing environmental justice and climate justice education, watershed and green infrastructure awareness, and stewardship training through dynamic intercollegiate internship programs to under-resourced communities, thereby using community power to create green power.

Clearwater's Green Cities Initiative assists Hudson River cities in incorporating principles of sustainability into all phases of municipal and community planning. The results create a healthier, greener and more supportable and equitable socioeconomic Hudson Valley. One that does not simply consider environmental stewardship, but makes it a priority. This Initiative serves as a unifying theme for Clearwater's environmental education, environmental action and community-based planning programs and as a guiding principle for expanding our critical work to help promote a more sustainable future for our communities now, and for future generations.

Rondout Creek & Watershed

Clearwater has successfully engaged community stakeholders, municipalities, and the general public to become invested in the future of their watershed and land use principles, allowing community and environmental health to be considered a way of life for all, instead of a small few. In 2011, Clearwater's Rondout Creek Watershed Council (RCWC) following one of its most productive and successful years to date; drafted a Implementation plan for the intermunicipal recommendations outlined in the Interim Watershed Management Plan for the Lower, Non tidal Rondout Creek completed in 2010. The RCWC's water resource protection and planning efforts continue to be closely coordinated with the NYC Department of Environmental Protection initiative in the upper Rondout, and the adjacent Lower Esopus and Wallkill watershed management groups. This most recent phase of planning for RCWC was funded through the New England Interstate Water Pollution Control Commission.

Fall Kill Creek & Watershed

The Fall Kill Watershed is located entirely in Dutchess County and encompasses five municipalities: the Towns of Clinton, Hyde Park, Pleasant Valley, Poughkeepsie and the City of Poughkeepsie. The Fall Kill has had a history of being ignored, used as a dumping ground, and a conduit for urban stormwater runoff. Recent efforts within the last six years by Clearwater and the Fall Kill Watershed Committee (FKWC) have brought attention to the vast historical and future importance and to the beauty of this ecologically and economically critical waterway. The Fall Kill, which runs through the city and empties into the Hudson River, will hopefully continue to be considered a growing community asset. In 2011, Clearwater and FKWC utilized key funding received via a Hudson River Estuary Program grant from the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, to develop The Fall Kill Plan: a comprehensive guide to transform the creek into a vibrant community resource through the development on a greenway and pocket parks. In 2012 Clearwater plans to design and install 7 innovative and educational signs in the city.

GREEN INFRASTRUCTURE

Wise green infrastructure (GI) practices offer potential solutions to critical problems facing communities in the region. In 2011, the Hudson Valley Regional Council (HVRC) implemented a planning project to protect and restore watersheds in the Hudson Valley region in New York State. As part of HVRC's community outreach team, Clearwater worked with municipal partners and local project committees to develop over 30 conceptual green infrastructure plans for three of seven communities in the Hudson River watershed. This project is designed to help communities dealing with challenging water resources issues such as sewer overflows, flooding and declining water quality, and to find effective, affordable solutions.

As development intensifies, especially in the Hudson Valley's cities, stormwater runoff has increasingly become an enormous problem. When stormwater falls on impervious surfaces such as streets, roofs, driveways, and parking lots, it cannot naturally infiltrate into the soil so it runs off carrying debris, chemicals, dirt, and other pollutants into a nearby storm sewer system or directly to a body of water causing serious damage to streams, lakes and estuaries.

ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE

Clearwater, along with Citizens for Equal Environmental Protection of the Hudson Valley (CEEP), and the Peekskill Environmental Justice Council, recently collaborated to create the Community-Based Environmental Justice Inventory (CBEJI), which can be found on the Clearwater website. This extensive process involved researching multiple sources of pollution, reviewing existing health data, and making an assessment of any disproportionate impacts on communities of color, ethnicity, or low-income populations in Peekskill. The CBEJI report included key findings in identifying major sources of pollution within the study area and a list of some pollutants released by these facilities. The report cites health effects commonly associated with exposure to those pollutants. The report also includes results of the Angler Survey of Hudson River fisherman from Verplanck to Annsville Creek that Clearwater completed in November 2010. The data provided in this report, along with its recommendations, can help in future planning to protect vulnerable communities from further pollution burdens and to preserve Peekskill's remaining natural resources. As a natural extension of this project, in 2011 Clearwater started to implement a Climate Justice initiative in four Hudson Valley cities with funding from a highly competitive EPA Environmental Justice Small Grant awarded in 2010. This grant utilized the template created by the Peekskill CBEJI to assess potential environmental, economic, public health, and safety impacts of climate change on communities of color and low income in Kingston, Poughkeepsie, Beacon, and Peekskill, each of which have waterfronts vulnerable to sea-level rise along their shorelines. As part of this groundbreaking project, Climate Justice Councils (Councils) were formed in these four communities to develop two projects each on climate change mitigation and adaptation. The Councils presented their projects at a regional Climate Justice Summit held on December 10, 2011 at the Catharine Community Center in Poughkeepsie. The diverse audience, composed of over 95 community members, enjoyed a thought-provoking and well organized program that included: a Green Jobs Panels and speakers such as Arturo García-Costas, Office of Environmental Justice of the NYS Department of Environmental Conservation; Aaron Mair, twenty two year veteran urban environmental activist; and Kristin Marcell of NYS DEC Hudson River Estuary Program. To promote diversity among the audience, Clearwater provided simultaneous translation into Spanish.

This project is an example of the positive impact community organizing and grassroots environmentalism with a focus in environmental justice has in the Hudson Valley. This project empowered, moved to action, and touched the lives of many individuals; this possibility is maximized when language and cultural barriers can be overcome.

VOLUNTEERS

Clearwater was born of its volunteers – in 1966, Pete Seeger and several friends got the crazy notion to build a boat to save the Hudson River and over forty years later, the sloop Clearwater is still sailing strong, educating people about the River, so they grow up caring about the River. We are incredibly lucky to be able to rely on the strengths of our thousand-plus volunteers each year from electricians, musicians, professors, doctors and lawyers, to college students, biologists, jack-of-all-trades and elementary age children- nationally and internationally. Clearwater truly is made of a mélange of caring, passionate and dedicated people, who believe in the music, the spirit and the possibilities of Clearwater. Thank you to all of our invaluable friends who have helped save our environment this year by donating your time to the Great Hudson River Revival – especially members of the Revival Planning Committee (who are starred with a ♫), educating on the sloop Clearwater and schooner Mystic Whaler, drafting the Rondout Creek Watershed Management Plan, corporate volunteer days, sloop clubs, office workers, environmental activists, and Re-Vamp the Camp builders! Thank you all for supporting Clearwater and our river.

CLEARWATER'S GREAT HUDSON RIVER REVIVAL PERFORMERS

For over 40 years, Clearwater has produced this annual environmental and music festival to support the organization and raise awareness. We thank the 130 stage and field performers, storytellers, American Sign Language (ASL) Interpreters, jugglers, rovers and new vaudevill'n artists who entertained and educated us on June 18-19, 2011 in Croton Point Park.
